Encouraging Good Routines and Behaviour

After school holidays it often takes a while to get back on track with routines and behaviours.

Here are some tips and ideas to help -

1. Focus on routines. Children thrive on routines and it helps them to become organised and responsible for their time and actions.
2. Family rules are important for everyone to know what the expectation is. Agree the rules together so the children are part of the rule making and are not just being told what they are. By having a few rules and using them as boundaries for what is acceptable, they can be referred to, if you are seeing challenging behaviours.
3. Encourage children to be problem solvers. It is great for children to be able to resolve things themselves eg; sibling rivalry – allow them to work it out between themselves and only intervene if the disagreement escalates.
4. Do not ignore misbehaviour. Along with the family rules it is important to think about rewards and consequences before any incidents. Consequences need to be timely and relevant.
5. Spend some one-to-one time with your child each day. It's always important to show an interest in what they are doing both at home and school.
